Weak global demand weighs on Samvardhana

With muted outlook, most brokerages cut earnings estimates for next couple of yrs

RAM PRASAD SAHU
Mumbai, 18 February

Notwithstanding weak global automotive component demand, Samvardhana Moterson delivered a resilient performance in the October-December quarter (Q3). The company's Q3 performance was broadly in line with Street estimates, as weakness on the revenue front was offset by better than expected gross margins and lower other expenses.

While the near-term outlook is affected by demand headwinds, the sharp price correction and strong Q3 performance have allayed investor concerns about growth and valuations. The stock of the automotive component major is down over 15 per cent in the past month.

Consolidated revenues for the company increased by just under 8 per cent, driven by a strong performance in emerging businesses as well as the modules and polymer segment. Sales from the wiring harness business and Vision Systems offset some of the gains from the other segments.

Although wiring harness revenues were down 1 per cent year-on-year (Y-o-Y), brokerages point out that this was largely due to demand-related concerns in the commercial vehicle markets of Europe and North America. Revenue growth for the Vision Systems business remained muted due to an unfavourable platform/model mix in North America. Revenues from the polymer segment accounted for 8 per cent of overall sales. Organic sales, however, declined by 1 per cent Y-o-Y due to weakness in global automotive production volumes.

Even with consolidated sales growth in the high single digits, the company continues to outperform

the global automotive market, which fell 12 per cent compared to the year-ago quarter. Although revenue growth was weak, the company expanded its operating profit by 16 per cent, in line with estimates. Operating profit margins grew by 70 basis points to 9.7 per cent, supported by better profitability in wiring harness and integrated assemblies.

polymer-related products and increased content as customers globally shift toward electric vehicles (EVs) and premiumisation trends should support growth.

Kotak Research has upgraded the stock to 'add' from 'reduce' as the price has corrected by 24 per cent in the past three months.

Motilal Oswal Research also expects the company to continue outperforming global automotive sales, supported by rising premiumisation and the EV transition, a robust order backlog in both automotive and non-automotive segments, and the successful integration of recent acquisitions. However, analysts Aniket Matre and Amber Shukla of the brokerage have reduced their 2025-26 earnings estimates by 15 per cent, factoring in the demand slowdown in key regions.

The stock has corrected over the past few months as investors remain concerned about the ongoing slowdown in some of its key regions and uncertainty around tariff barriers that may impact global business dynamics. However, the strong Q3 performance demonstrates the company's business resilience and should help allay these concerns, they add. The brokerage has a 'buy' rating. Nuvara Research remains positive about the company's prospects, citing strong management capability, inorganic initiatives, a pending order book, and increasing content. It has reiterated its 'buy' rating.

TOTAL MARKET INDEX-BASED FUNDS

Idea for simple, hands-off, and long-term investing

HIMAJI PATEL

Angel One Asset Management Company (AMC) recently launched India's first Exchange-Traded Fund (ETF) and an index fund based on the Nifty Total Market Index. These funds offer investors broad market exposure in a single fund. Currently, three existing funds in this segment are offered by Mirae Asset Investment Managers (India), Bandhan AMC, and Groww AMC.

Broad exposure
The Nifty Total Market Index is a free-float, market-cap-weighted index. The Nifty Total Market Index is one of the most comprehensive and liquid indices, capturing 95 per cent of the entire listed universe, says Suresh Basu, head of products, Bandhan AMC.

Investors gain exposure to all market segments—large, mid, small, and micro-cap stocks. The Nifty Total Market Index includes 750 stocks: 100 large caps (69.4 per cent market cap weight), 150 midcaps (17.4 per cent), 250 smallcaps (9.5 per cent), and 250 microcaps (3.7 per cent), says Siddharth Srivastava, head of ETF product and fund manager, Mirae Asset Investment Managers (India).

Cost-effective passive exposure
Total market index funds provide cost-effective access to the entire stock market. The fund automatically rebalances its holdings, minimising the need for active investor intervention," says Alekh Yadav, head of investment products, Nifty Total Market Index. "It is a one-stop solution for active investor intervention," says Alekh Yadav, head of investment products, Nifty Total Market Index.

Sanctum Wealth. These funds simplify investing. "Investors don't get bogged down in the details of sector allocation or individual stock selection," says Basu. A market-cap-weighted index gives higher weight to the stronger companies. "The index includes only the top-performing companies that have demonstrated the ability to generate returns and create value over time," adds Basu.

Can't avoid broad market declines
While passive investing is beneficial, it lacks the potential for alpha generation. A total market index-based fund is also vulnerable to market downturns. "Since they invest across all market segments, total market funds can't avoid broad market declines, making them less effective alternatives compared to more targeted strategies," says Basu.

Liquidity can also be a concern
Liquidity can also be a concern due to exposure to small and microcap stocks. "As the fund's asset under management (AUM) grows, it may end up holding stocks with low liquidity, which may pose challenges," says Yadav.

Alternative: Segmented market strategy
Investors seeking flexibility may prefer separate large, mid, small, and microcap funds. "This approach allows for portfolio customisation based on risk profile, time horizon, and return expectations," says Yadav.

Segmented investing enables strategic allocation. "Investors can adjust their allocations based on evolving market conditions or personal views," says Basu. However, managing multiple funds adds complexity and may increase costs. "Rebalancing across market caps could lead to tax implications," says Yadav. Timing among market caps can be challenging. "Not aligning the allocation to the right market capitalisation may expose investors to undue risk," says Basu.

Who should go for an all-market fund?
Total market funds are ideal for long-term investors who prefer a simple, hands-off approach, making them suitable for those unwilling to manage multiple funds. For investors aiming for higher returns and greater customisation, a segmented approach for separate funds is preferred.

When selecting a total market fund, Basu emphasises the importance of cost, tracking error, and AUM. He recommends a lower total expense ratio (TER) and tracking error while favouring a higher AUM.

Inactive credit cards: Risks, credit score impact, and tips to manage them

Some of us hold multiple credit cards, but only one or two are used regularly.

What is a dormant credit card account?
A credit card account is considered dormant when it has not been used for a certain period.

Do inactive credit cards hurt your credit score?
It is a common misconception that inactive credit cards hurt your credit score. They do not directly, however, they do factor into your credit utilisation. Closing them can sometimes decrease your available credit, which can then negatively impact your score if you are carrying high balances on other cards," said Prashant Kumar, CEO at KreditPe.

Can a credit card be closed due to inactivity?

A credit card can be closed due to inactivity. If your card remains unused for an extended period, the issuer may choose to close your account. This closure can negatively impact your credit utilisation ratio, which makes up 30 per cent of your credit score.

Strategic management of dormant cards
Consider closing inactive cards with high annual fees. If you have several dormant accounts, consider keeping those with longest history and highest history

Weak global demand weighs on Samvardhana

With muted outlook, most brokerages cut earnings estimates for next couple of yrs

RAM PRASAD SAHU
Mumbai, 18 February

UNDER PRESSURE

Notwithstanding weak global automotive component demand, Samvardhana Motherson delivered a resilient performance in the October-December quarter (Q3). The company's Q3 performance was broadly in line with Street estimates, as weakness on the revenue front was offset by better than expected gross margins and lower other expenses.

While the near-term outlook is affected by demand headwinds, the sharp price correction and strong Q3 performance have allayed investor concerns about growth and valuations. The stock of the automotive component major is down over 15 per cent in the past month.

Consolidated revenues for the company increased by just under 8 per cent, driven by a strong performance in emerging businesses as well as the modules and polymer segment. Sales from the wiring harness business and Vision Systems offset some of the gains from the other segments.

Although wiring harness revenues were down 1 per cent year-on-year (Y-o-Y), brokerages point out that this was largely stable given demand-related concerns in the commercial vehicle markets of Europe and North America. Revenue growth for the Vision Systems business remained muted due to an unfavourable platform/model mix in North America. Revenues from inorganic avenues accounted for 8 per cent of overall sales. Organic sales, however, declined by 1 per cent Y-o-Y due to weakness in global automotive production volumes.

Even with consolidated sales growth in the high single digits, the company continues to outperform

the global automotive market, which fell 12 per cent compared to the year-to-date quarter. Although revenue growth was weak, the company expanded its operating profit by 16 per cent, in line with estimates. Operating profit margins grew by 70 basis points to 9.7 per cent, supported by better profitability in wiring harness and integrated assemblies.

Given the muted outlook, most brokerages have cut their earnings estimates for the next couple of years by 3-5 per cent. However, analysts Rishi Vora and Praveen Bora of Kotak Research believe the company will outperform blended market growth, driven by a strong order book and new product additions.

Further, the company's foray into newer markets through acquisitions, the scale-up of its SAS (automotive) business with the insourcing of polymer-related products, and increased content as customers globally shift toward electric vehicles (EVs) and premiumisation trends should support growth.

Kotak Research has upgraded the stock to 'add' from 'reduce' as the price has corrected by 24 per cent in the past three months.

Motilal Oswal Research also expects the company to continue outperforming global automotive sales, supported by rising premiumisation and the EV transition, a robust order backlog in both automotive and non-automotive segments, and the successful integration of recent acquisitions. However, analysts Aniket Mhatre and Amber Shukla of the brokerage have reduced their 2025-26 earnings estimates by 15 per cent, factoring in the demand slowdown in key regions.

The stock has corrected over the past few months as investors remain concerned about the ongoing slowdown in some of its key regions and uncertainty around tariff barriers that may impact global business dynamics. However, the strong Q3 performance demonstrates the company's business resilience and should help allay these concerns, they add. The brokerage has a 'buy' rating. Nuvama Research remains positive about the company's prospects, citing strong management capability, inorganic initiatives, a pending order book, and increasing content. It has reiterated its 'buy' rating.

TOTAL MARKET INDEX-BASED FUNDS

Ideal for simple, hands-off, and long-term investing

HIMANU PATIL

Angel One Asset Management Company (AMC) recently launched India's first Exchange-Traded Fund (ETF) and an index fund based on the Nifty Total Market Index. These funds offer investors broad market exposure in a single fund. Currently, three existing funds in this segment are offered by Mirae Asset Investment Managers (India), Bandhan AMC, and Groww AMC.

Broad exposure
The Nifty Total Market Index is a free-float, market-cap-weighted index. The Nifty Total Market Index is one of the most comprehensive and liquid indices, capturing 95 per cent of the entire listed universe, says Suresh Basu, head of products, Bandhan AMC.

Investors gain exposure to all market segments — large, mid, small, and micro-cap stocks. The Nifty Total Market Index includes 750 stocks: 100 large caps (69.4 per cent market cap weight), 150 midcaps (17.4 per cent), 250 smallcaps (9.5 per cent), and 250 microcaps (3.7 per cent), says Siddharth Srivastava, head of ETF product and fund manager, Mirae Asset Investment Managers (India).

Cost-effective passive exposure
Total market index funds provide cost-effective access to the entire stock market. The fund automatically rebalances its holdings, minimising the need for active investor intervention, says Alekh Yadav, head of investment products,

Sanctum Wealth. These funds simplify investing. "Investors don't get bogged down in the details of sector allocation or individual stock selection," says Basu. A market-cap-weighted index gives higher weight to the stronger companies. "The index includes only the top-performing companies that have demonstrated the ability to generate returns and create value over time," adds Basu.

The diversified nature of the index mitigates risks. "Since this index holds a wide variety of stocks, the negative performance of one stock or sector is often offset by the positive performance of others," says Basu. Srivastava says these funds can serve as core portfolio holdings.

Can't avoid broad market declines
While passive investing is beneficial, it lacks the potential for alpha generation. A total market index-based fund is also vulnerable to market downturns. "Since they invest across all market segments, total market funds can't avoid broad market declines, making them less effective at limiting losses compared to more targeted strategies," says Basu.

Liquidity can also be a concern due to exposure to small and microcap stocks. "As the fund's asset under management (AUM) grows, it may end up holding stocks with low liquidity, which may pose challenges," says Yadav.

Alternative: Segmented market strategy
Investors seeking flexibility may prefer separate large, mid, small, and microcap funds. "This approach allows for portfolio customisation based on risk profile, time horizon, and return expectations," says Yadav. Segmented investing enables strategic allocation. "Investors can adjust their allocations based on evolving market conditions or personal views," says Basu. However, managing multiple funds adds complexity and may increase costs. "Rebalancing across market caps could lead to tax implications," says Yadav. Timing among market caps can be challenging. "Not aligning the allocation to the right market capitalisation may expose investors to undue risk," says Basu.

Who should go for an all-market fund?
Total market funds are ideal for long-term investors who prefer a simple, hands-off approach, making them suitable for those unwilling to manage multiple funds. For investors aiming for higher returns and greater customisation, Yadav suggests opting for separate funds.

When selecting a total market fund, Basu emphasises the importance of cost, tracking error, and AUM. He recommends a lower total expense ratio (TER) and tracking error while favouring a higher AUM.

Inactive credit cards: Risks, credit score impact, and tips to manage them

Some of us hold multiple credit cards, but only one or two are used regularly.

What is a dormant credit card account?
A credit card account is considered dormant when it has not been used for a certain period.

Do inactive credit cards hurt your credit score?
It is a common misconception that inactive credit cards hurt your credit score. They don't directly. However, they do factor into your credit utilization. Closing them can sometimes decrease your available credit, which can then negatively impact your score if you are carrying balances on other cards," said Prashant Kumar, CEO at Kredit.pe.

Can a credit card be closed due to inactivity?

A credit card can be closed due to inactivity. If your card remains unused for an extended period, the issuer may choose to close your account. This closure can negatively impact your credit utilisation ratio, which makes up 30 per cent of your credit score. Strategic management of dormant cards

Consider closing inactive cards with high annual fees. If you have several dormant accounts, consider keeping those with longest history and highest interest.
